■ Effect of the intervention on the use of evidence-based practice: The results of the intervention were positive. The use of evidence-based practice was significantly higher in the intervention group than in the control group.

Dr. Wilson suggests a broader, less-structured approach to the topic. Besides the current efforts at participating in some way, students will also be encouraged to research.

The present research on the effects of the intervention on the children's social skills was limited to the children's ability to identify and express their own emotions. The children's ability to identify and express the emotions of others was not assessed. In future research, the children's ability to identify and express the emotions of others should be assessed. The children's ability to identify and express the emotions of others is an important social skill that is necessary for successful social interactions.
