The Reproductive System

FOCUS: Reproductive organs in males and females produce sex cells. The reproductive organs sustain the sex cells, transport them to the site where fertilization can occur, and, in the female, nurture the developing offspring both before and, for a time, after birth. Reproductive organs also produce hormones that play important roles in the development and maintenance of the reproductive system. These hormones help determine sexual characteristics, influence sexual behavior, and play a major role in regulating the physiology of the reproductive system.
