1. The first step in the process of the development of the organization is the identification of the organization's mission and vision. This is a critical step as it sets the direction for the organization and provides a clear focus for all activities. The mission statement should be concise and clear, and the vision statement should be aspirational and motivating.

2. The second step is to conduct a SWOT analysis. This involves identifying the organization's strengths, weaknesses, opportunities, and threats. This analysis is essential for understanding the organization's current position and for identifying areas for improvement.

3. The third step is to develop a strategic plan. This plan should outline the organization's long-term goals and the strategies for achieving them. It should also include a detailed budget and a timeline for implementation.

4. The fourth step is to implement the strategic plan. This involves putting the plan into action and monitoring progress. It is important to have a system in place for tracking progress and for making adjustments as needed.

5. The fifth step is to evaluate the organization's performance. This involves assessing the organization's progress against its goals and identifying areas for improvement. This evaluation should be done regularly and should involve all levels of the organization.

6. The sixth step is to communicate the organization's mission and vision. This is important for ensuring that all employees understand the organization's purpose and are committed to its success. This communication should be done through a variety of channels, including internal newsletters, training sessions, and public relations efforts.

7. The seventh step is to foster a culture of innovation and creativity. This is essential for the organization to stay competitive in a rapidly changing market. This can be done by encouraging employees to share their ideas, by providing resources for innovation, and by rewarding creative thinking.

8. The eighth step is to build strong relationships with stakeholders. This includes customers, suppliers, and the community. Building strong relationships can help the organization to better understand its stakeholders' needs and to develop strategies that meet those needs.

9. The ninth step is to ensure financial stability. This involves managing the organization's finances carefully and ensuring that it has enough resources to cover its operating expenses and to invest in its future.

10. The tenth step is to regularly review and update the organization's strategy. This is important because the organization's environment is constantly changing, and its strategy must be flexible enough to adapt to those changes.
