Key Words

Word	Definition	Word	Definition
Circular flow of income model:	a model of the economy, based on income flows from one sector of the economy to another in a circular motion, which explains levels, of national income and output, and how changes in these occur.	stagnation	refers to a prolonged period of little or no growth in an economy. This condition is often characterized by a growth rate of less than 2-3% annually as measured by the gross domestic product (GDP) and is typically highlighted by periods of high unemployment. Stagnation can be a temporary condition or part of an economy's long-term structural condition, and it may involve substantial unemployment and under-employment, with the economy generally performing below its potential.
equilibrium	a balanced situation from which there is no tendency to change; for example, the level of output or income brought about by conditions in an economy.	Economic growth	A sustained increase in the productive capacity of an economy over a specific period (usually one year), generally indicated by the increased availability of goods and services in the economy.
Expenditure	Outflows of money from one sector of the economy to another.	Economic policy	A range of priorities and objectives introduced by governments to assist in the managing of an economy; economic policy may change over time based on which political party is in power and in response to broader changes in the global economy.
Income	Inflows of money to one sector of an economy from another.	Inflation	The sustained increase in the general level of prices over a period of time (usually a year), measured by an increase in the consumer price index.
Injection	Inflow of income into the circular flow of income model.	Nominal GDP	The value of final output of an economy's goods and services expressed in current prevailing prices with no adjustment for the effects of inflation.
Leakage	Outflows of expenditure from the circular flow of income model.	Real GDP	The value of final output of an economy's goods and services adjusted for the effects of inflation.
Output	Production of goods and	Aggregate demand	The level of expenditure on total
